A career represents a life-long commitment to on-going education. Much of that education will consist of seminars and teaching specific skills: education offers great employee benefits. These seminars and skills programs can be presented at public events as well as paid events.

Public Seminars & Workshops

To promote my consulting business, I offer occasional public seminars and workshops, or keynote speeches, by invitation at selected events. Some events may be open, others may be closed for paid attendees only. If your organization is interested in having any materials presented at your event, contact me well in advance to confirm availability for a selected date.

I offer in-house training programs for your organization.

With over 30 years of project management experience in managing projects, I have presented a many seminars and in-house training programs. I have facilitated the PMI-Toronto Professional Mentoring Program for 10 years, and I have classroom teaching experience. I also have courses for independent learning available on-line, and I can provide a 1-day overview course for most of these modules (that you can also sponsor as part of your employee education program) that also explains how the independent study mode works.

Not everyone is comfortable with self-directed study, so options are available to accommodate each course as an in-house delivered training program. To deliver the equivalent of a college course in a few days I use a blend of self-directed training and live seminar sessions to teach the subject and to administer quizzes that confirm the students' understanding of the materials. We can usually manage 2 modules/day (morning session, and afternoon session) and complete the full scope of the course. Students need access to a computer and their individual study package that ensures they get proper credit for a successful course completion. Students that require a bit more time can complete their training as a review after the live sessions are completed.

Low cost introductory offer for commercial engagements

For this introductory offer we charge $850.00 per day for commercial engagements (for out-of-town venues add $400.00 for travel time, plus reimbursement of transportation and lodging expenses at cost). The client will provide the venue, with computers for students, and an LCD projector for presenting.

Respectfully,

Frits J. Bos, PMP
